Chapter 1 Information on the Research School

The Netherlands Institute for Cultural Analysis (NICA) is dedicated to the study of Cultural Analysis. The field is not defined by a particular type, medium, or genre of objects. Cultural analysis investigates contemporary socio-cultural objects, phenomena, and developments from a broadly hermeneutic, critical, theoretical, and interdisciplinary perspective. The field cuts across different disciplines, such as Comparative Literature, Media Studies, Art History, Theatre and Performance Studies, Sociology, Communication Studies, and others.

The goals of the School are as follows:

- Facilitating a national graduate environment, in which staff researchers, PhD candidates, and research-master students meet and interact. As a national school, we strive to introduce our members to an extended intellectual community, open up research perspectives beyond local priorities, and advance the sharing of resources and expertise. Following this aim, we observe no rigid boundaries between activities for PhD fellows and research-master students (though different emphases certainly apply);
- Organising activities that map and analyse the present — including the deployment of the past within the present (cultural memory, cultural heritage). We'd like our activities to reflect current research priorities, and to propose new tools and concepts to gain critical purchase on contemporary circumstances that are changed and changing;
- Fostering international dialogue;
- Opening out to social and political partners outside the academy. We want to enable intensified contact between academics and various parties working outside the university: professionals, intellectuals, curators, organisers, activists, artists, journalists, writers;
- Cultivating a light and non-hierarchical organisation, hospitable to varied initiatives. We prefer informal dialogue over protocols and procedures. Both PhD fellows and research-master students are very welcome to initiate activities of their own. In principle, our activities are open to all.

Chapter 5 Reflection

In January 2021, NICA moved to Leiden University, after being gracefully hosted by the University of Amsterdam for two consecutive terms. We are extremely grateful to the prior management team and all parties involved at both universities for making the transition possible and smooth, and thank the Deans for the trust placed in us. At Leiden University, we had a fresh start with an entirely newly appointed advisory board, whom we met twice over the year. The board now has representatives of all partner universities, including the newly affiliated Tilburg School of Humanities and Digital Science, and is strengthened by a representative of the PhD community. We are deeply grateful for their enthusiasm and involvement on all topics relevant to sustaining NICA's research community. Our shared aim continues to be to offer a safe harbor to all NICA members—ResMA-students, PhD-candidates and staff members—so as to facilitate intellectual exchange.

To mark the move to Leiden we have fully revised and updated our website and newsletters. Registration for core courses and certain events now runs via the website, which also includes a newly added agenda of upcoming events, a better search function, a clear and intuitive infrastructure for our educational program and clear protocols explaining how to organize an event and how to reclaim expenses. We have also included new categories in both newsletter and website, for example for sharing non-NICA-events or vacancies relevant to the community. Our hope is that the website/newsletter will, in this way, start functioning as a go-to-place where research interests and people can meet. In the years to come we hope to update and generate visibility for our membership directory, and perhaps generate a space for the PhD- and ResMA-councils where members can meet and greet.

This year's core educational program was put together in collaboration with the prior MT at the University of Amsterdam. This meant that we were able to secure teaching relief for no less than three courses from the University of Amsterdam, which is generous by all standards. Together with the two retained core-course modules at Leiden University and Utrecht University, and the generously proposed additional intensive core-course offered by Tilburg University, we had a strong program that was nonetheless quickly overbooked, as the NICA ResMA- (and PhD-) memberships still outnumber the available places. Together with the new board, we have put together an informal but ambitious strategic plan to secure more teaching relief hours for the years to come. Our aim is not only to broaden our educational program, but also to make more places available for both ResMA and PhD members, as we encourage their alliance. Moreover, we strive to secure a broader regional spreading of NICA's core courses in the future, aspiring for all the partner universities to be involved and contribute to NICA's educational program. As expected, securing the teaching relief hours is a laborious and often complicated and opaque process, as the procedures for allocating teaching relief hours for the national research school is not always clear or well implemented at the different partner universities. We are now starting to see a shift, however, thanks to the agreement reached between Logos and DLG, specifying that all research- master students must follow 10 EC of course work at the national research schools. The agreement remains implemented in different ways and to different degrees at the affiliated partner universities, but also at the various national research schools. This flexibility would not be much of a problem, if not for the fact that NICA's financing partly depends on member students fulfilling said requirement, and on the other research schools to carry their weight. Finetuning the implementation of the agreement thus deserves our continued attention. Nonetheless, our attempts so far, have been met with cooperative responses at the various affiliated universities, which inspire great confidence for productive collaborations in the future.

Meanwhile, we were able to continue to offer a rich program of seminars, conferences, master-classes, improvisational initiatives, artistic events—often also for credits—thanks to the many wonderful initiatives that have been proposed by NICA's larger (staff and PhD) community.

We are greatly indebted to all members of the NICA community who have made this possible, handing in proposals and organizing events that help further strengthen and build NICA's research and community. We could not have done it without them! We feel humbled by the vibrancy and reach of our program and are unwavering in our willingness to support where possible, so that NICA can continue to serve as a hub relaying experimental research and radical thought from within and without the academy.

Our third main priority this year, besides updating the website as well as intensifying and spreading our educational program, has been to set up a ResMA- and a PhD-council. We have openly recruited members from the ResMA- and PhD-communities through the NICA-website and newsletter. A selection was made, partially on the basis of having ResMA -and PhD-members of as many different partner universities as possible involved. The councils have now met, informally, twice. A formal launch was postponed due to the Covid restrictions. The coming year we hope to support the councils in setting them up more firmly, so that they can optimally represent the interests of their respectively communities, generate occasions for the fruitful exchange of thoughts, but also enable them to network and to socialize, and engage with NICA's larger research community where wanted. Both councils will be represented at the advisory board.

Due to Covid-restrictions a lot of events, seminars and conferences have been postponed or have taken place online instead of in person. Like with many other research schools, this has left a surplus on our budget. In the coming year we expect more events to take place in person again. We are also organizing a more cost-intensive summer school (in collaboration with our partners from ESSCS) and have intensified our core course program, making available for the organizers to invite keynotes where needed. With the Covid-restrictions lifted, we have also received more proposals for new events for the upcoming year, which we will gladly support. We further plan to use part of the surplus budget to further update our communication, updating the membership directory. We also aspire to build a separate (or built-in) website for the ResMa and PhD community, in part also to make visible the output from our educational program. NICA further continues to admit self-funded PhD-candidates to its activities without reserve and have, as per usual, postponed payment of self-funded PhDs pending equal treatment of funded and self-funded PhDs. The peer support such a national community can foster is a precious resource.

Due to maternity leave and care taking responsibilities of various members of the MT, the office was one person short almost continuously this year. Another challenge this year has been the lack of an educational platform (i.e. Brightspace or Canvas) in support of our educational program, partly attributable to GDPR-regulations and administrative dead-ends. This is a challenge for all national research schools, and is worthy of joint attention and effort.
